Miracles in Alcoholics Anonymous

From an Empty Lot to a Job in Hand

I was unemployed for almost a year. This was extremely disheartening, especially since for most of that year, I had numbed my feelings of unease with alcohol. But then I got sober. As I returned to AA, I was told that all I could do was take the next right action. I knew that I wanted to get back into security, so I went to a security school in Moore to get certified. I spent the day I hit one month sober in the class for unarmed, then the next week I did the training for armed. This being finished, I imagined that I would be employed by the end of the month. This did not happen.

I spent the next month applying to all types of security jobs and doing the work of the program. My sponsor and I spoke every day, went to meetings at least daily, and started working with other alcoholics. I got through my 5th step (which is another story in and of itself). My level of frustration was increasing daily, but I was clinging to the work and my sobriety with the desperation of a drowning man. My sponsor also told me the stupidest thing I had ever heard. He said that I didn't need to take on the first job that was offered! But knowing that I needed to remain teachable, I responded that this was true unless the first job offered was my dream job. To which he asked what I would consider my dream job? I gave him a list of 7-15 things off the top of my head. Not that I was obsessing over it or anything...and I continued on my way without a second thought.

"My sponsor also told me the stupidest thing I had ever heard. He said that I didn't need to take on the first job that was offered!"

I was trying to find the balance of trusting my Higher Power, so doing the work as it applied to my job search as well, I decided that I would spend a Monday going to several security companies and giving them my résumé. I also went online and tried many different ways of phrasing my search. The last one I used led me to a website that told me that the very next day there was a hiring event at a large security company.

The next day, I got dressed and went to the address listed on the website I found. As I was approaching, I saw nothing but an empty field. I was getting very upset, so I pulled over. Contemplating going back home and stewing in my frustration, I decided to at least look up to headquarters of the company listed as having the hiring event. That turned out to be right around the corner, so I drove there.

As I was pulling in, I saw many open parking spots which struck me as strange. But for some reason I went in anyway. I saw on the directory that they were on the second floor, so up the elevator I went. Approaching the door, I noticed that there was a normal looking office. There was no evidence of a hiring event at all. Frustrated, I decided to look around to see if I could find a restroom on the floor. After looking around the side that the company was on, I saw a man in the company shirt escorting another young man into the office. He noticed me and asked what I needed. I told him about the hiring event that I saw online and the address that was given. He responded that the building that was at that address hadn't even been there in years, and that there was obviously no hiring event that day, but he invited me to fill out a form and sit in the main area. It was at this time that a guy I was with in the armed class almost two months ago walked in, so we began to chat. Meanwhile the guy from the company came up to get me and bring me back to his cubicle. He explained that they had just got off a call asking about reducing overtime. One of the things that I had told my sponsor that I wanted was to have overtime hours available. He returned to bring me a list of open positions. The positions covered three different areas of the city, and were only available from Thursday through Sunday, which meant there was another thing on my list that wasn't fulfilled. But, they paid well, and I was getting desperate. So, I asked to look at the list. The required time for the Thursday and Friday slots only had 10 hours between them, and it was near Tinker. I live almost 40 minutes away from that location. I expressed my concern about that and heard my sponsor in my head saying that I didn't need to accept the first job offered (I hate when that guy is right, which is most of the time). So, I said that I was afraid that this wasn't quite the right position for me. I felt deflated. Suddenly, another guy in the office remembered another location that had high turnover, which is usually a red flag. But, they gave him a call, and told the job manager that there was an armed guard looking for a job, so he asked that I go to his location for an interview. I drove over there.

Stories About Connections in AA

"I saw so many things that my Higher Power placed in a row that I accepted before I left the interview."

On entering the building, I approached the front desk and informed the receptionist that I was there for an interview. The guy in charge of that location came out to get me. As we were walking back, I pointed out that he had the same gun that I would be carrying, which he shrugged off. Because this was a spur of the moment interview, he did not have my application, so I offered him my résumé He began looking through it and asked me about several things on it. When he came to my military service, he asked what I did. I answered that I did avionics on the C-17. He informed me that he was a crew chief on F-15's. We continued on with the interview, and as he was checking off boxes that he wanted, I was filling out that list that I gave to my sponsor. The only thing on that list that wasn't checked off for me was the Monday through Friday requirement, which was the one thing I desired the least on that list. I saw so many things that my Higher Power placed in a row that I accepted before I left the interview. I texted my sponsor immediately. This is only one example of how this program can work. And not all things in sobriety are as good as this story. One thing that my sponsor regularly reminds me of is that this time through the program will not be the same as my first time through. But, I know that my Higher Power was working all through this year of unemployment. He used it for me to get my sleep apnea treated through the V.A., and most importantly, to get me sober. Taking the next right step brought me from an empty lot to a dream job in hand. I start orientation this week, and thank God every day for keeping me sober, and for guiding me to exactly where I needed to be.

Step Reading of the Month

Turning it Over

We were having trouble with personal relationships, we couldn't control our personal natures, we were a prey to misery and depression, we couldn't make a living, we had a feeling of uselessness, we were full of fear, we were unhappy, we couldn't seem to be of real help to other people.

Alcoholics Anonymous, p. 52

These words remind me that I have more problems than alcohol, that alcohol is only a symptom of a more pervasive disease. When I stopped drinking I began a lifetime process of recovery from unruly emotions, painful relationships, and unmanageable situations. This process is too much for most of us without help from a Higher Power and our friends in the Fellowship. When I began working the steps of the AA program, many of these tangled threads unraveled, and little by little, the most broken places of my life straightened out. One day at a time, almost imperceptibly, I healed. Like a thermostat being turned down, my fears diminished. I began to experience moments of contentment. My emotions became less volatile. I am now once again a part of the human family.
